

Leadership update at LXE Hearing

LXE Hearing Appoints Adam Karp Interim CEO

- Veteran hearing industry executive Adam Karp has been appointed interim CEO of LXE Hearing, following the departure of co-founder Nic Klopper, who will remain a strategic advisor after stepping down due to health reasons. Karp brings extensive leadership experience in the hearing health space.
- LXE Hearing, formed from a strategic merger earlier this year, is focused on expanding access and innovation in hearing health, with plans to grow its U.S. product portfolio and continue developing award-winning, self-fitting hearing aid technology for people with mild to moderate hearing loss.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (August 6, 2025) – LXE Hearing has appointed Adam Karp as its interim CEO following the departure of co-founder and former CEO Nic Klopper last month. Adam is a veteran hearing industry executive with a long track record of successful leadership in the hearing health space.

Klopper, who stepped down as CEO last month due to health concerns, will continue as a strategic advisor for the company. During the past year, hearX, Lexie and Eargo merged to create a combined company called LXE Hearing. Klopper grew what was a two-person startup to a global leader in hearing care innovation with more than 350 employees across four continents.

Karp is an industry pioneer having co-founded and led Lively, now known as Jabra Enhance. As CEO, he developed and oversaw high-performance teams with a focus on customer acquisition and loyalty.

“LXE Hearing is a formidable player in hearing with an enviable growth trajectory,” said Karp. “I’m looking forward to collaborating with this top-notch team to advance access and innovation in hearing health.”

LXE Hearing was formed earlier this year as the result of a strategic merger between hearX – including its consumer brand Lexie Hearing – and Eargo. The company is focused on expanding access to new customers with mild to moderate hearing loss, growing its product portfolio in the U.S. and enhancing its already award-winning hardware and software to offer wearers an unparalleled hearing experience. In May, Eargo launched Eargo 8, its most advanced self-fitting hearing aid with high-definition sound quality and the company’s signature virtually invisible design. LXE Hearing has plans to introduce another new product in the U.S. in the second half of 2025.

About LXE Hearing

LXE Hearing brings together expertise in product design and technology innovation to disrupt and reimagine the hearing industry to the benefit of the people who need it most. Our portfolio brands offer a full suite of industry-leading hearing technology: from detection and diagnosis, to intervention of hearing loss through industry-leading over-the-counter hearing aid products.

Contact Details:

Zeem Fourie
LXE Hearing
press@lxehearing.com
